

MIGRATION PATTERNS

Domestic migration patterns illustrate worker flow within states and throughout the nation. As can be seen with this graph, individuals come to DFW from all parts of the country. The reasons why they relocate range from quality of life, to employment prospects, to overall business climate.

IN-MIGRATION TO DFW FROM OTHER MAJOR METRO AREAS: 2011 TO 2015

GEOGRAPHY	2011-15 IN-MIGRATION
● Houston-The Woodlands-Sugar Land, TX	74,491
● Austin-Round Rock, TX	38,306
● Los Angeles-Long Beach-Anaheim, CA	33,999
● San Antonio-New Braunfels, TX	29,176
● New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA	27,857
● Chicago-Naperville-Elgin, IL-IN-WI	18,311
● Washington-Arlington-Alexandria, DC-VA-MD-WV	16,090
● Atlanta-Sandy Springs-Roswell, GA	15,412
● Phoenix-Mesa-Scottsdale, AZ	15,328
● San Francisco-Oakland-Hayward, CA	10,522
● San Diego-Carlsbad, CA	9,312
● Minneapolis-St. Paul-Bloomington, MN-WI	9,123

GEOGRAPHY	2011-15 IN-MIGRATION
● Riverside-San Bernardino-Ontario, CA	8,850
● Detroit-Warren-Dearborn, MI	6,790
● Miami-Fort Lauderdale-West Palm Beach, FL	5,785
● Philadelphia-Camden-Wilmington, PA-NJ-DE-MD	4,732
● Orlando-Kissimmee-Sanford, FL	4,461
● Seattle-Tacoma-Bellevue, WA	4,350
● San Jose-Sunnyvale-Santa Clara, CA	3,222
● Pittsburgh, PA	3,088
● Raleigh, NC	2,408
● Charlotte-Concord-Gastonia, NC-SC	1,856
● Durham-Chapel Hill, NC	1,385
● Boston-Cambridge-Newton, MA-NH	1,018

SOURCE: PUMS Data, U.S. Census Bureau, tabulated by Dr. Timothy Bray, UTD