

GLOBAL TRADE

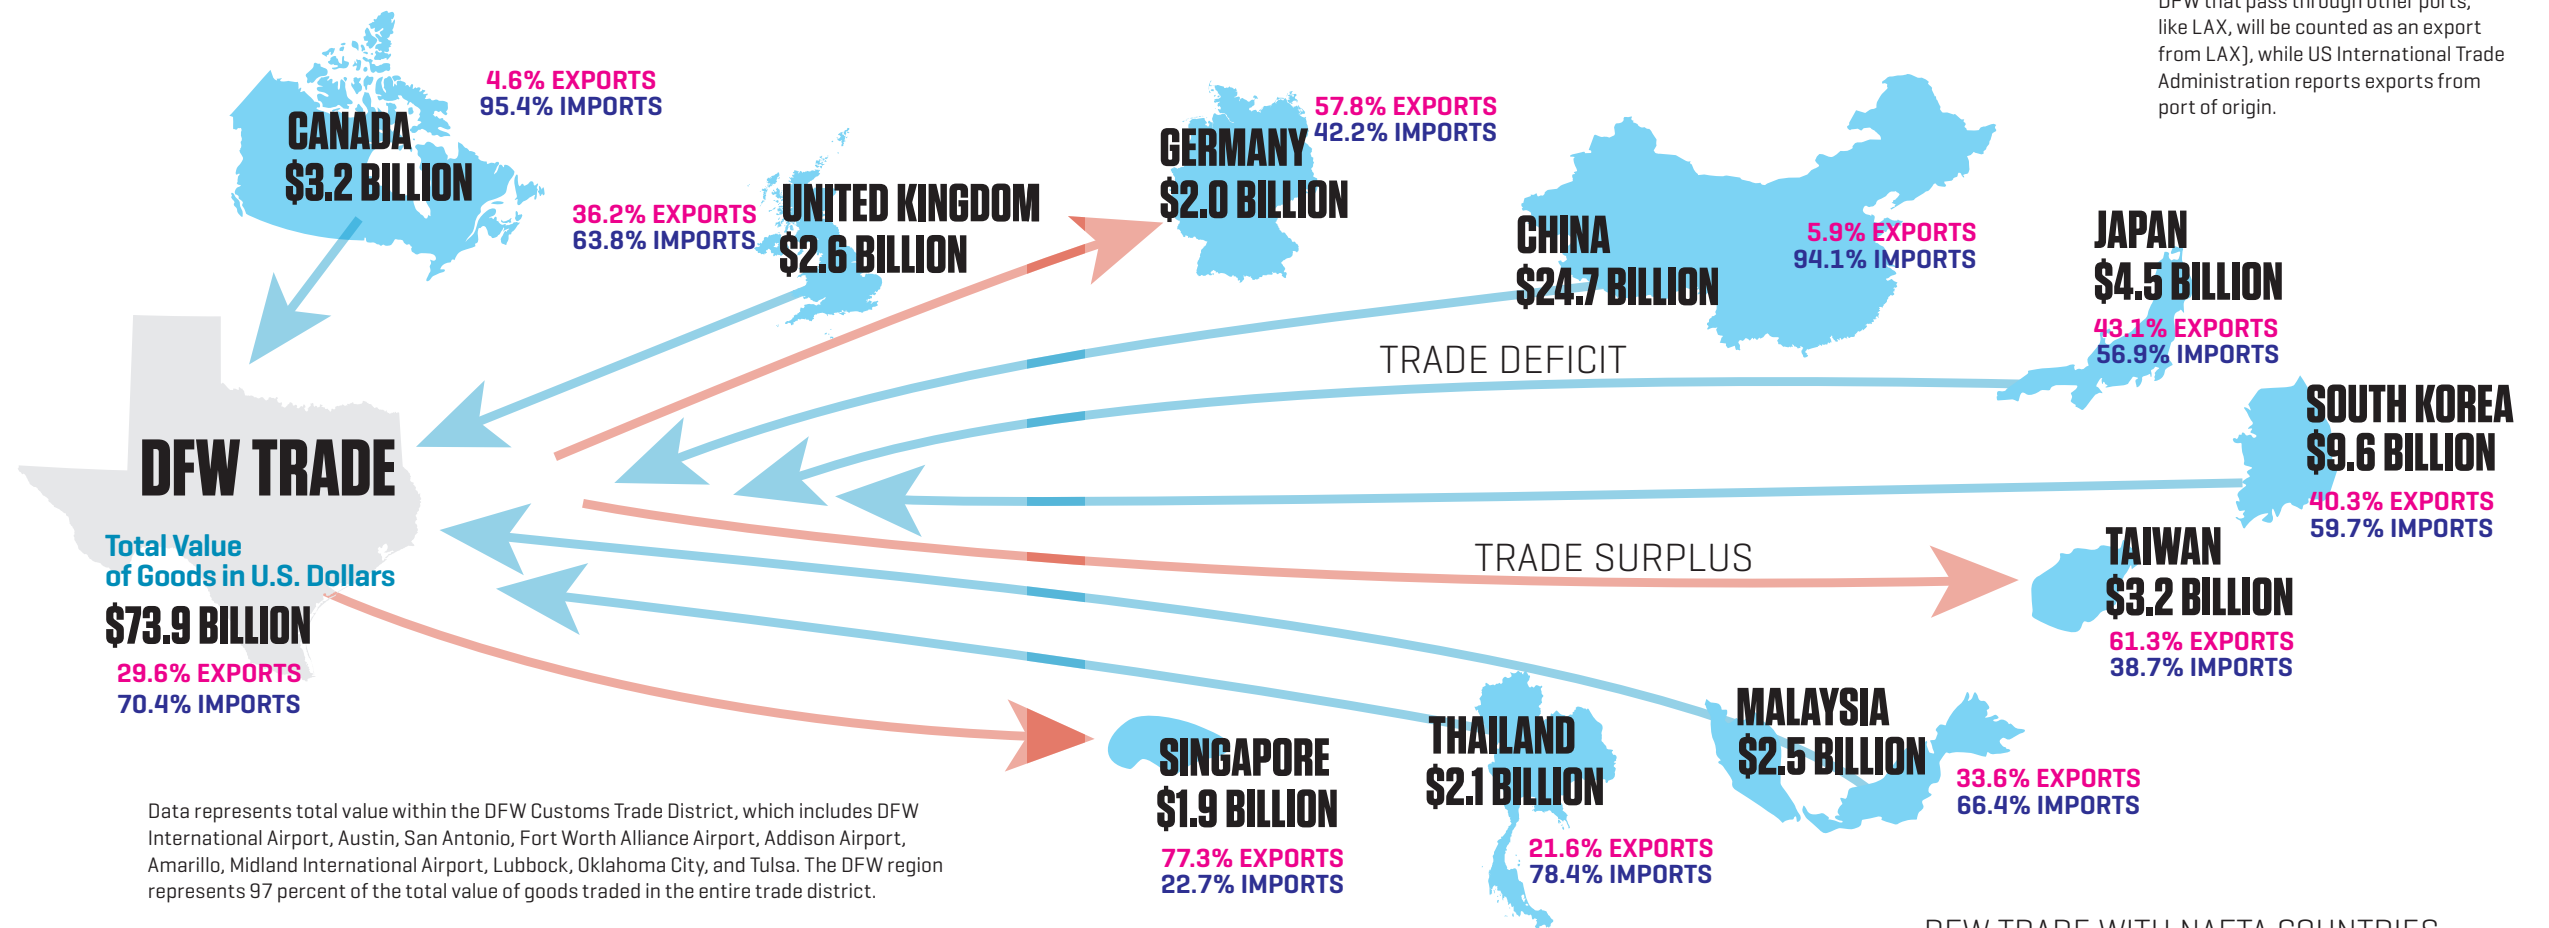

In 2015, the Dallas metropolitan area was the eighth-largest export market in the U.S., with merchandise shipments totaling $27.4 billion. This accounts for 38 percent of Texas's merchandise exports in 2015.

During this period, Dallas benefited from existing trade agreements, exporting $8.8 billion to the NAFTA region and $391 million to the CAFTA-DR region. 32.1 percent of Dallas's merchandise exports went to NAFTA countries.

The latest data available [2014] indicates that 8,684 companies exported goods from the Dallas metropolitan area. Of these, 7,617 were small- or medium-sized exporters [SMEs] with fewer than 500 employees.

Note on differing export measurements: USA Trade Online, a U.S. Census tool, reports exports from final port of exit [e.g. goods bound for export from DFW that pass through other ports, like LAX, will be counted as an export from LAX], while US International Trade Administration reports exports from port of origin.
